

A diagram illustrating the concept of a number being composed of two parts. At the center is a circle containing the number 100. Eight arrows radiate from this circle to eight different pairs of dotted lines, each pair separated by a plus sign (+). The top-right arrow points to the pair 90 + 10, while the other seven arrows point to generic dotted lines.

$$100 = 89 + \dots$$